The travel movements are proportional to the duration of the subscription. The NS Business Card can therefore never be used exclusively for private trips. The burden of proof for business use lies with the user. If a fine is imposed by the Tax Authorities, it is charged to the user and will be deducted from the salary. Correction rates for failure to check in and out will also be deducted from the user's salary.

10.7 Only actual costs will be reimbursed. If employee, whether or not due to disability, does not perform work for employer, employee shall no longer be entitled to a commuting allowance.

Article 11 – Pension

11.1 Employee takes part in the pension scheme of Stichting Pensioenfonds voor Personeelsdiensten (StiPP) as soon as the statutes of StiPP provide for mandatory participation.

11.2 The StiPP scheme is a defined contribution scheme that provides for the formation of a pension capital for the purpose of purchasing a retirement pension and/or partner's pension. StiPP has two schemes: the Basic Scheme and the Plus Scheme.

11.3 If employee participates in the Basic Scheme of StiPP, there is a waiting period of 8 weeks. After the 8 waiting weeks, employer pays the pension premium. Employee pays no premium. As a result, there is also no pension deduction visible on the employee's pay slip. Employee remains in the Basic Scheme for a total of 52 working weeks, after which employee joins the Plus Scheme.

11.4 If employee participates in the Plus Scheme of StiPP, employer will deduct from the salary of employee one third of the average premium. A pension deduction is therefore visible on employee's pay slip. Employer pays two-thirds of the premium. The premium in the Plus Scheme is the same for everyone, but how much pension capital employee accrues depends on age in accordance with a graduated scale. Each age category has a different capital accrual. The older employee is, the higher the pension capital accrual.

11.5 The amount of the premium is determined each year by the board of StiPP.

11.6 More information about the regulations can be found on the website of StiPP Pension Fund for Personnel Services: www.stippensioen.nl.

Article 12 – Company assets

12.1 Employee will - in the context of the exercise of the function - use and handle the entrusted company assets, in accordance with their destination, and therefore in general exercise the care, as expected from a good employee. Employee is obliged to immediately notify employer of a lack or loss of any company asset. In case of demonstrable notice to employee, employer may charge costs to employee.

12.2 Employee undertakes, at the first request of the employer and in any case at the end of the employment contract, to deliver to employer, all the assets of employer or documents (documents, copies and/or other data carriers) regarding employer and/or his affiliates and/or his clients, which are in his possession. Execution of a final settlement will only take place when all goods, which are on loan to employee, have been delivered to employer.

12.3 If employee, whether or not due to disability, does not perform work for employer, employer may also require employee to return to employer the entrusted company assets for the remaining duration of that absence.

12.4 When commissioning a company's property, parties also agree, if desired, to a loan agreement.

Article 13 – Obligation to seek permission for ancillary activities

13.1 During the employment contract, the employee is obliged to request permission from the employer if he performs or will perform work - paid or unpaid - of any kind for himself or for and/or on behalf of third parties. The employer may agree to prohibit ancillary activities in the event of an objective justification, such as health and safety, protecting the confidentiality of company information, avoiding conflicts of interest or exceeding the working hours regulations.

Article 14 – Confidentiality clause

14.1 Employee shall, both during and after termination of employment, maintain strict confidentiality about everything that comes to the attention of employee in the performance of the function in connection with affairs and interests of the company of employer.

14.2 This obligation to secrecy also includes all data c.q. details of the relationships and clients of employer, which come to the knowledge of employee pursuant to his position.

14.3 Breach of the confidentiality obligation provides a compelling reason for dismissal and/or declaration in respect of the offense of Article 272 and/or 273 Penal Code.

14.4 Employer in this context shall also mean the companies affiliated with employer.

Article 15 – Non-competition clause

15.1 Employee is forbidden, both during and for a period of one (1) year, within the region of the Netherlands, after the termination of this contract, regardless of how or why the employment contract will be terminated, to establish, to run, to commission, to partly run, a business in any form, identical, similar or related to that of employer, either directly or indirectly, or to be employed therein or thereto in any way, whether for remuneration or not, or to have an interest of any kind therein.

15.2 This non-competition clause is necessary because of important business interests of employer as provided for in Article 7: 653 paragraph 2 Dutch Civil Code. Employer hereto provides the following justification: in the exercise of his functions, employee will gain knowledge of a coherent set of organizational, (market) technical information and other competitively sensitive business information. As part of his duties, employee will be deployed to clients to make specialized knowledge available to them as a consultant. These are assignments which, in principle, employee cannot obtain without the intervention of employer. Employer invests in obtaining these assignments. Employee has access to - and is involved in - processing competitively sensitive customer and product information of employer. Employee himself has a direct relationship with the clients. Employer makes investments in building and maintaining his relationship network. In addition, employer makes considerable and ongoing investments in the unique development process of employee, by, among others, education/training both internally and externally. This competitively sensitive business information and this precious unique development process largely determine the market position of employer and belong to his business flow. All this means that, with the competitively sensitive business knowledge gained at employer and also because of large investments made in employee, employee may cause such competition to employer, that this non-competition clause is necessary because of important business interests of the employer.

15.3 Employer in this context shall also mean the companies affiliated with the employer.

Article 16 – Relationship clause

16.1 For one (1) year after the end of the employment contract, regardless of how or why the employment contract will be terminated, employee is also forbidden to offer to services, to work for or at, or to (do) maintain business contact with, a relationship or client of employer, or to be directly or indirectly involved with a company which provides services to a relationship or a client of employer. Employee further undertakes not to encourage, in any way, directly or indirectly, that a relationship or client of employer switches to a company competing with employer.

16.2 Relationship or client means any natural or legal person (including its affiliates) and his/her employees, with whom employer has entered into one or more contracts during three (3) years prior to the end of the employment contract.

16.3 This relationship clause is necessary because of important business interests of employer as provided for in Article 7: 653 paragraph 2 Dutch Civil Code. Employer hereto provides the following justification: in the exercise of his functions, employee will gain knowledge of a coherent set of organizational, (market) technical information and other competitively sensitive business information. As part of his duties, employee will be deployed to clients to make specialized knowledge available to them as a consultant. These are assignments which, in principle, employee cannot obtain without the intervention of employer. Employer invests in obtaining these assignments. Employee has access to - and is involved in - processing competitively sensitive customer and product information of employer. Employee himself has a direct relationship with the clients. Employer makes investments in building and maintaining his relationship network. In addition, employer makes considerable and ongoing investments in the unique development process of employee, by, among others, education/training both internally and externally. This competitively sensitive business information and this precious unique development process largely determine the market position of employer and belong to his business flow. All this means that, with the competitively sensitive business knowledge gained at employer and also because of large investments made in employee, employee may cause such competition to employer, that this relationship clause is necessary because of important business interests of employer.

16.4 Employer in this context shall also mean the companies affiliated with employer.

Article 17 – Anti recruitment clause

17.1 For two (2) years after the end of the employment agreement, employee is prohibited to hire employees who, at the time of the end of the employment contract or in the 12 preceding months, were employed by employer or companies affiliated to employer, directly or indirectly, whether or not in return for payment, or to engage in any other way with them in a business relationship, or to approach them in order to (try) to induce them to break the employment with employer, or to recruit them, either on behalf of (a company of) employee or on behalf of another company.

Article 18 – Intellectual property rights

18.1 Employer has reserved all rights (of intellectual property) in the broadest sense and on the fullest extent of the products/services and the work and the activities of employer and on the products/services resulting from or in connection with the activities and this employment contract. Employee acknowledges that employer is entitled on this matter and is not entitled to the rights.

18.2 Employee undertakes not to violate or restrict the rights in any way, by use or otherwise, nor by an action for annulment and will not grant permission to third parties to use the rights in any way whatsoever.

18.3 Employee undertakes towards employer to establish all intellectual property rights arising out of or related to the work and/or the execution of this contract, in consultation with employer and to immediately transfer these rights to or register them in the name of employer and to perform all acts and formalities that are necessary and useful to this end.

18.4 The rights remain the property of employer, irrespective of the suggestions and/or ideas put forward by employee and/or by any third party, for improvement and/or modification of the products/services, work and/or activities of employer and the products/services, developed by employee in the context of the work and/or the execution of this employment contract.

18.5 Employer in this context shall also mean the companies affiliated with employer.

Article 19 – Unacceptable behavior

19.1 Employer attaches great importance to the observance of proper standards and values in dealing with employees, in the dealings of his employees with him and his relationships / clients, and the mutual dealings between employees. Employee shall at all times behave as a good employee. Unacceptable behavior which includes in any way, (but not exclusively): theft, embezzlement or deceit, abuse of power, fraud, sexual harassment or bullying, alcohol or drug use, violent behavior or insult, is always penalized. In severe cases, employer will proceed to instant dismissal.

19.2 Employee may not claim, request or accept any compensation, rewards, gifts or promises from third parties, unless Digital Power has given permission for this. It is also prohibited to accept bribes.

Article 20 – Penalty clause

20.1 With every violation by employee of the provisions of articles 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18, employee forfeits to the benefit of employer - such explicitly in derogation from Article 7: 650 paragraph 3 and paragraph 5 Dutch Civil Code - without summons or notice of default a penalty immediately due and payable of € 25.000,- (in words: twenty five thousand euros) plus an amount of € 2500,- (in words: two thousand five hundred euros) for each day that the violation continues. Employer reserves the right, in lieu of the fine, to claim full compensation.

20.2 Employer also retains the authority - if necessary in interim injunction proceedings - to demand in addition to the fine, fulfillment of the agreement and/or a prohibition on the unlawful actions of employee.

Article 21 – Miscellaneous

21.1 This agreement constitutes the entire employment contract between employee and employer. Employee is not employed by any companies affiliated with employer.

21.2 Additions to and deviations from this contract are valid only if and to the extent that they have been agreed between parties in writing or confirmed by employer in writing.

21.3 Employer is entitled to amend one or more working condition(s) arising from this employment agreement without employee being entitled to substitute compensation if employer has such a substantial interest in this amendment, that the interest of employee which would be harmed by the amendment, by the standards of reasonableness and fairness must give way.

21.4 Parties consider, among other things, as a reasonable cause for amendment of the employment conditions, changes in the social security legislation or tax law regime regarding wages or additional fees.

21.5 If employee wishes to receive information about the procedure for terminating this employment contract, employer refers to the Dutch Civil Code, Section 9, Title 10, Book 7.

21.6 In the Netherlands, the Compulsory Identification Act applies. Employee is therefore obliged to show a valid identification document upon commencement of employment and Digital Power must keep a copy in the administration. If employee grants above authorization, he declares to have been sufficiently informed about the state of affairs with regard to the data referred to in this provision.

21.8 Employer assumes that the employee can be reached by clients and colleagues during office hours and that employer may provide employee's mobile telephone number to third parties in that context.

21.9 Employee will directly inform employer of any change in the personal circumstances of address, phone number, bank account number, email address, marital status and/or birth, allowing employer to maintain a proper administration.
