Remote working regulations

An allowance and budget

Remote working regulations

Version May 12, 2022

Why these regulations?

As described in the document 'The New Way of Working', working from home is permitted. It is even encouraged to combine working in the office, at the client's office and at home. You can find the guidelines for that in 'The New Way of Working' guidelines. As Digital Power, we believe that we should facilitate this for all colleagues. Doing so is twofold: on the one hand, there are increased costs in the home situation for e.g. internet use, heating, coffee, etc. On the other hand, everyone needs to have a good home office to stay fit and vital.

How did we arrive at these regulations?

The content of this document was developed in close cooperation with the Works Council (Dutch: OR). We then consulted with a number of colleagues on an individual basis about the interpretation of the two allowances/budgets. The regulations were drawn up to reflect the prevailing situation as closely as possible. However, this situation is subject to change. These regulations will therefore be evaluated annually to determine whether they are still sufficiently in line with the prevailing situation.

How should I read this document?

This document mentions an allowance and a budget. These are explained separately below. They are therefore also two separate benefits:

1. Expense reimbursement for working from home (OTW)
2. Home office budget (TWB)

The regulations are effective as of April 1, 2022. This document has been prepared to best reflect the wishes and needs at the time of drafting these regulations. Because the situation, especially with working from home, is subject to change, management always reserves the right to unilaterally amend these regulations.

1. Expense reimbursement for working from home (OTW)

The expense reimbursement for working from home (OTW) is intended to compensate for the extra costs incurred at home as a result of working from home. This includes all costs that are incurred. Internet and telephone costs are also included.

The expense allowance applies to everyone, no individual distinction is made. The assumption is that everyone works from home approximately 50% of the time (based on 'The New Way of Working').

For this purpose, € 20 net is paid out each month through the salary. Colleagues who work part-time will receive the OTW proportionally. We are aware that this amount is not a full reimbursement of the costs incurred, but an allowance that fits in with the combination of working in the office, at the client's premises and at home.

Calculation example OTW:
A colleague working 32 hours per week (80%) receives a monthly reimbursement of €16 net.

2. Home office budget (TWB)

The home office budget (TWB) is intended for setting up a workplace at home. It enables you to ensure that you can work at home just as well as at the office. This budget can only be spent on items that contribute to improving the home office. What this budget may be spent on is explained in Appendix A.

The home office budget (TWB) is a one-time budget of € 1,000 that is made available. Anyone can make use of this budget by submitting an expense report. How to submit an expense report is explained in appendix B.

The guidelines for using this budget are as follows:

1. Before you can use this budget, you have to agree with the conditions of the Home office budget via an agreement. You do this by signing the 'Home office budget agreement'.
2. The budget becomes available immediately after the successful completion of your probation period.
3. It is a one-time budget and unused budget will remain open until termination of employment. Upon termination of employment, it is not possible to claim the remaining budget.
4. Costs for repair and replacement should also be paid from this budget.
5. There is a depreciation period of 5 years. In order to keep this feasible, it was decided to write off € 200 per year from the declared amount. No additional budget can be accumulated. The depreciation starts at the moment an item/expense report is submitted (so not at the moment of purchase) and upon leaving employment, any remaining amount will be deducted from the final pay. See the next page for a calculation example.
6. After the depreciation period expires, the purchased items belong to you.
7. Items can be claimed up to 6 months after purchase. Please note that depreciation starts at the time of submitting the expense report and therefore not at the time of purchase.
8. The budget applies to everyone with a part-time percentage of at least 60%. If the percentage is lower, we expect you to work from the office.

Items that are provided on the basis of a doctor's prescription, such as computer glasses or an RSI mouse, fall outside this regulation and will be fully reimbursed by Digital Power. However, as an organization, we do recommend using the budget for items that contribute to good posture and work environment, for some this is even mandatory as described in Appendix A.

Calculation example TWB:

If you enter employment on January 1st and submit an expense report for € 300 on April 1st, the remaining budget on April 1st will be € 700. On October 1st of year 2, this € 300 claim will have been fully written off. If you then submit a new expense report for € 500 on January 1st of year 3, the remaining budget is € 200. This 2nd expense report will be written off completely on July 1st of year 5.

Appendix A. Requirements

The Home Office budget is provided for the following items:

- Desk
- Office chair (health and safety)*
- Monitor and mounting system
- Headset
- Keyboard
- Computer mouse
- Docking station
- Lighting (health and safety)*

 For items where 'health and safety' is mentioned, the expense report is only approved if the item purchased is ARBO-certified. You must submit proof of this with the expense report. If this is not the case, the expense report will be rejected.*

Appendix B. Expense report TWB

To make use of the home office budget you need to submit an expense report. For this purpose, two options have been created within AFAS/My InSite, specifically for the TWB.

Go to AFAS Insite (https://82448.afasinsite.nl/) → My Insite → Expense reports → Occupational health safety/home office

Two items that you can choose from are:

1. Home office setup (OHS/tools) – for ARBO-certified home office items
2. Home office setup (non-OHS) – for other home office items

For option 1 'Home office setup (OHS/tools)' it is indicated which items can be claimed. If your item is not included, it should be claimed automatically through option 2.

The requirements for the expense report are as follows:

- Proof of purchase must be attached
- Proof of payment should be attached (e.g. a bank statement)
- The submitted documents should be clearly legible
- The amount claimed should correspond to the receipt
- If you are submitting an expense report for which ARBO certification is mandatory, then you must attach proof of this certification to the expense report
